National Park Service Sets Schedule for Battle of New Orleans Bicentennial in January 2015

CHALMETTE, LA.: The National Park Service and Jean Lafitte National Historical Park and Preserve will commemorate the bicentennial of the Battle of New Orleans in early January 2015. The battle, fought at what is now Chalmette Battlefield and one of Jean Lafitte's six south Louisiana sites, occurred on January 8, 1815, and was the last major battle in the War of 1812. Nearly a thousand living history experts in period dress are expected to participate in activities, programs, and reenactments throughout the area during the bicentennial week.

National Park Service events are as follows. All National Park Service events are free and open to the public. A detailed schedule of events will be available on the park website by mid-December.

Wednesday, January 7 – Jackson Square, New Orleans

- 11:00 a.m. Call to Arms. Reenactment of December 23, 2014, event.
